UNITY Complete[®]

One blood test from mom.
Direct genetic insights about your baby.

Understanding how UNITY Complete Fetal Risk Screen works

UNITY Complete screens genes (tiny packages that do specific jobs in the body) and chromosomes (big bundles of many genes).

These genetic instructions (DNA) tell our bodies how to grow and develop.

When pregnant, the baby's DNA can also be found in the pregnant mom's blood.

UNITY Complete can determine if there may be changes to the baby's genes (recessive conditions) or chromosomes (aneuploidies).

UNITY Complete Fetal Risk screens for several recessive and chromosomal conditions.

If your child is diagnosed with one of these conditions, it can lead to serious medical consequences.

More options are available if you have this information earlier. This includes additional testing and early interventions.

About recessive conditions

Recessive genetic conditions are inherited. This means that the parents* can pass a condition on to their baby.

One example of a recessive condition is Cystic Fibrosis. This condition is one of several that UNITY Complete tests for.

Parents who are carriers will typically not have any signs or symptoms of the condition.

If you and your partner are BOTH carriers of the same condition, then your baby is at a much higher chance of being affected/having symptoms.

About chromosomal conditions

Unlike carrier screening, most chromosomal conditions are not typically inherited, or passed on from parents to babies.

Chromosomal conditions (also called aneuploidies) occur when a baby has an extra or missing chromosome.

Each pregnancy has a small chance of a chromosomal condition. This risk increases with mom's age.

One example of a chromosomal condition that UNITY Complete tests for is Down Syndrome.

* in this context, we define parents as reproductive male and female partners though we acknowledge that parents can be defined in several ways

What information will I learn with UNITY Complete?

As early as week 10, you can learn the answers to these important questions:

-  What is the chance that my baby will have a serious chromosomal condition?
-  Is my baby at risk of a serious recessive genetic condition?
-  Am I a carrier of a serious recessive genetic condition?

UNITY Complete is different

- Only test to look at baby's DNA for recessive conditions
- A father's blood draw is not needed
- BOTH recessive and chromosomal conditions with just one test

With UNITY Complete, you also have the option to:

Determine the sex of your baby

Learn if your baby will be a boy or girl, or choose to keep it a surprise.

Determine the baby's fetal antigen status

Pregnant patients with RhD- blood type may be a candidate for additional testing.

What to expect with UNITY Complete Fetal Risk Screen

It starts with mom's blood sample

Once we receive your sample, you will receive a text. The baby's father is not required for UNITY Complete.

We process your test

Your test is processed at our accredited lab by licensed professionals.

Results are ready

You can expect the results for chromosomal conditions in ~7 days and for recessive conditions in ~7-14 days.
